Historic Performance

Fund Comment

South African and Namibian money markets remained relatively stable, supported by consistent central bank policy. After the South African Reserve Bank (SARB) held its repo rate at 7.25%, the Bank of Namibia (BON) mirrored this stance, keeping its repo rate at 6.75% to preserve the currency peg and maintain the monetary policy differential. Inflation remained subdued, with Namibian headline inflation at 3.5% and South African inflation at 2.8%. However, food inflation is becoming a growing concern, pushing up prices in both countries. Ongoing trade negotiations and global geopolitical uncertainties also supported the cautious "higher for longer" narrative, which has maintained attractive real rates in money market funds. We continue to monitor SARB and BON closely, as there is still room for one more rate cut, with selective reinvestment as rates plateau.
