Fund Comment

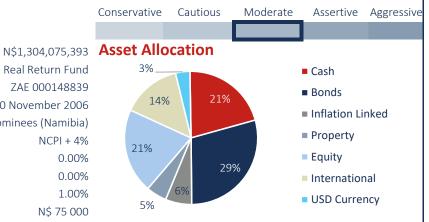

June was a broadly supportive month, with most asset classes delivering either positive or stable returns. Bond markets were constructive, supported by the resolution of South Africa's fiscal standoff, steady inflation, and continued foreign interest in local debt. Money market yields remained attractive as both the South African Reserve Bank and the Bank of Namibia kept rates unchanged, maintaining a favourable real yield environment. South African equities posted another strong month, buoyed by firm retail sales data and a strengthening rand, even as the domestic economic outlook remained mixed and coalition dynamics added political uncertainty. Property returns were flat but resilient, with the sector continuing to show impressive performance over the year to date and one-year horizon. Offshore assets, particularly developed market equities, added meaningfully to returns. US markets hit new highs as investors looked past short-term volatility and priced in earlier than expected rate cuts.
